Research: Poster Presentations

2:00 PM - 4:00 PM
Summit Pavilion

Subjective Listening in Jazz: How Musicians and non-Musicians Hear Jazz Improvisation,
Derek Molacek-presenter
This is a presentation on subjective listening of musicians vs. non-musicians in relation to jazz improvisation. Through the scientific method, I hope to analyze preferences of both in an attempt to help musicians connect with a non-musician audience and vice versa.

Jazz Music, Musicians, and Iconographic Depictions in Popular Culture and Mass Media,
Ramsey Castaneda-presenter
An analysis of mass media depictions and portrayals of jazz in advertisements, film, television, and product branding. This research investigates the motivations (particularly commercial) behind various depictions of jazz and the way these portrayals affect public discourse and the popular perception of jazz culture.

Where is the Space for Women in Jazz?
Jenelle Orcherton-presenter
Marian McPartland asked, Can't we women make our own contribution to jazz. This is still a relevant concern for women, one that is being publicly reckoned with. This session will touch on two influential women, Marion McPartland and Esperanze Spalding, following their performance contexts and approaches to dealing with social issues.

Artistic Research in Jazz: A New Research Paradigm or Old Wine in New Bottles?
Michael Kahr-presenter
The paper maps artistic research at current academic institutions and traces precursors in the history of jazz by discussing the interrelation of theory and practice in influential publications in jazz theory.

Alignment and Nonsurgical Pain Relief Methods for Musicians: A Trumpet Player's Perspective,
Jack Wengrosky-presenter
Approximately seventy-five percent of musicians will experience pain that interferes with their ability to play an instrument properly. Restoring proper body alignment may relieve or prevent pain while creating a path to wellness. Musicians who practice good posture are better able to perform effectively.

The Intersection of Avant-Garde Music and Liturgical Jazz in the 1960s,
Derick Cordoba-presenter
Edgar E. Summerlin’s connection to the avant-garde, particularly the music of Ornette Coleman, allowed him to experiment with incorporating modern jazz and contemporary classical compositional and improvisational techniques into the context of liturgical jazz. In this paper, I explore the evolution of avant-garde liturgical jazz.

The Challenges and Advantages of the Self-Accompanied Female Jazz Pianist/Vocalist,
Kristin Sponcia-presenter
Self-accompanied female jazz vocalists find themselves in a variety of contexts: solo, singing with an accompanist, and playing and singing with rhythm section. This research centers on the varied circumstances which arise in these settings and how the subjects overcome challenges and exploit the advantages of being a dual performer.

Treatments of the ii-V7-I Chord progression in Jazz Improvisation,
David Detwiler-presenter
This research project will study how master jazz performers use the ii-V7-I chord progression in improvisational practice. This chord progression is essential to jazz improvisation and has been handled by jazz musicians in many different ways. The proposed compilation of ii-V7-I improvisatory phrases will include a brief analysis of each idea.

Post-Ottoman Musical Influences in Jazz since the 1950s and Armenian Jazz Bands in the New York City since 1975,
Sopon Suwannakit-presenter
A Historical and Analytical Study of Musical Integration between Jazz and Post-Ottoman Music in the U.S. since the 1950s with an Emphasis on Armenian Jazz Bands in New York City since 1975.

The Staying Power of Bebop Trumpet Playing,
Kent Hickey-presenter

Collaborative Research: From Process to Product, Chandelle Rimmer & Tom Van Seters-presenters
Vocalist Chandelle Rimmer and pianist Tom Van Seters discuss collaborative research in the context of a CD recording project involving numerous faculty and students from several different departments at MacEwan University in Edmonton, Alberta. Starting with the compositional process, they will trace the development of several of their works.

Chord-Scale Usage as Compositional Method in Jazz: Scalar Application Types in the Music of Thad Jones, Mike Rogers-presenter
This session examines the manner in which Thad Jones implements chord-scales as a compositional device in orchestrating his scores. Along with applying a single chord scale to a given chord symbol, three additional chord-to-scale application types and their use as a compositional method by Jones are explored.

Joe Henderson: The Composer, Russell Haight-presenter
This presentation will address the compositional style of saxophone legend Joe Henderson, including: nature of melodic themes, use of planing and parallelism, ostinato and pedal point, unconventional cadences, and rhythmic devices. In addition, a discussion of standards performed throughout his career will provide insight into Henderson’s aesthetic.

An Analysis of the Improvisational Style of Trombonist Andy Martin, Kevin Jones-presenter
The purpose of my proposed poster session presentation is to share my analysis of the improvisational style of the L.A. based trombonist Andy Martin. I will compare a complete analysis of his improvisation on “Alone Together” to examples of his harmonic, rhythmic and phrasing style from other transcriptions of his work that I have completed.

Saxophone Articulation for the Big Band, Seth Carper-presenter
Through transcriptions of lead alto performances of various big band recordings, this research identifies different types and patterns of saxophone articulations, and is designed to help young saxophonists sound more characteristic to jazz style in the big band.

A New Orleans Jazz Pilgrimage, Steve Call-presenter
In 2016 Dr. Steve Call took the BYU Jazz Legacy Band to New Orleans to perform with established professionals in historic venues. A film was produced showing powerful student experiences culminating in a Preservation Hall show. Steve will discuss pre-trip research, planning and screen excerpts from the film.

We, Not Me: The Life and Music of Bob Cranshaw, Seth Lewis-presenter
A study of Bob Cranshaw’s career, from life in Chicago to success in New York as a jazz musician, on television, Broadway, and film. Also discusses his role in the New York Musicians Union and his role as co-founder of the Jazz Foundation of America.

Blue’s Blues, Jeffrey Benatar-presenter
Three transcribed Bb Blues by “Blue” Mitchell will be analyzed. Use of the Blues scale, rhythmic variety, and chromaticism will be identified. Incorporating these elements into one’s solo concept will be discussed. Perfect for Jazz musicians at all levels.

Feminist Imagery, Iconography, and Allusion in Esperanza Spalding’s Good Lava, Laura Ferguson-presenter
This session will explore the feminist imagery, iconography, and allusion found in Esperanza Spalding’s Good Lava, with an emphasis on the juxtaposition of organic vs. mechanic, active vs. stasis, and masculine vs. feminine displayed in the visual presentation of the multi-media music video.

Early Jazz Bass History, Bob Sinicrope-presenter
This presentation traces the origins of jazz bass playing showcasing pioneering bass players’ bios, photos, video, audio and transcribed solos.
